1. Purpose

Scrúdú Bhonnleibhéal 2 (A2) is a general proficiency examination of Irish. It is aimed primarily at adult learners of Irish. It is suitable for people in Ireland or abroad who are studying Irish at night classes or who are attending similar courses and who would like a qualification to attest to their ability in Irish.

The examination tests knowledge not only as described in the syllabus for this level but also that included in the syllabus for Bonnleibhéal 1. Many candidates who undertake this examination have already passed the examination at Bonnleibhéal 1 (A1). The specifications which form the basis for Scrúdú Bhonnleibhéal 2 (A2) are broadly based on the descriptors for level A2 of the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages (2001). It is estimated that candidates who have achieved Bonnleibhéal 1 (A1) will be able to undertake this examination after an additional 160-200 hours of study. It should be noted that the examination itself is not, however, tied to any particular course of study.

In this document you will find information regarding:

2. General information

The specifications in this syllabus outline the minimum language level required to enable candidates to function within a defined subject range. The focus is on various language functions pertaining to particular topics and subject-matters. Examples are given of expressions which could be adopted by the candidates when using these functions. In addition, lists of useful vocabulary and phrases are provided. The lists of vocabulary and expressions in this document are not exhaustive and candidates are advised of the need to also focus on topics and vocabulary that relate directly to their own interests and circumstances.

Below is a brief description of what candidates at this level can do in the various skills.

2.1 Speaking and listening

At this level, candidates will be able to describe, in simple terms, their background, their work, their daily activities, their likes and dislikes. They will have sufficient vocabulary to be able to participate in simple, short conversations on such familiar topics with sufficient ease, although they will be hesitant at times.

They will understand simple sentences and common phrases pertaining to ordinary life, provided that the language is clear, is delivered at a reasonable pace and isn't overly dialectal. They will continue to rely greatly on others to help them in their efforts to communicate. Candidates will be able to ask basic questions and be able to maintain communication through asking for repetition, or reformulation, clarification etc. and will be able to use everyday appropriate forms of greetings, farewell etc.

Candidates' pronunciation will generally be clear enough to be understood despite noticeable mother tongue interference and interlocutors may have to ask for clarification now and again.

Candidates may use their own dialectal preference although, at this level, it is not expected that they should be consistent in their use of a particular dialect.

Candidates will use simple structures correctly but still systematically make basic mistakes – mixing up tenses, for example. However, what the candidate is trying to say is usually clear from the context.

2.2 Reading

Candidates will be able to handle short, simple texts on familiar matters of a concrete nature which consist of high frequency everyday language. See the specifications below. They will be able to get the gist of a text (e-mail or letter, for example) or understand some details and specific information in a short text as long as it is in simple language and the subject matter pertains to an area in which they have some knowledge or interest. Candidates will not be able to handle abstract subject matter or material which doesn't contain commonly used vocabulary. They will have to use their limited resources in terms of vocabulary and structure to ascertain the meaning of a text and to understand details of simple texts.

2.3 Writing

The candidate will be able to write short, basic, descriptive sentences and phrases (in an e-mail message, for example) on subjects directly relating to his/her own life and personal experiences. They will be expected to use appropriate vocabulary and the sentences and phrases they produce will be constructed with simple conjunctions such as 'agus', 'ach' and 'mar'.

Candidates are expected to be able to correctly use the simple structures as outlined in the specifications below but it is expected that they will make basic mistakes which may sometimes cause the reader some comprehension difficulties.

Candidates are advised to pay particular attention to the correct use of the basic grammatical structures and the correct spelling of common words. There is a noted lack of awareness among learners of Irish at every level of ability in relation to grammatical accuracy and consistency in the application of grammar rules. Therefore, grammatical accuracy and spelling have been emphasized in the marking schemes for the writing component at all levels including the bonneleibhéal.

- This part of the exam lasts for approximately 25 minutes.
- The speakers used will be good, clear-voiced speakers. The three main dialects will feature but none of the speakers will have a very strong regional accent.
- The materials used in this part of the exam will be based on authentic material. By this we mean that the texts will be based on commonly heard materials, for example announcements on RTÉ Raidió na Gaeltachta, conversations and so on.
- Where a written answer is called for (a word or a phrase), these must be in Irish.

- Each question in section 1, 2 and 4 carries two marks. Each question in section 3 carries one mark. This gives a total of 45 marks, which represents 25% of the whole examination.
- There are two question types. In multiple choice questions, candidates are reminded that they can only tick one box. Candidates who tick more than one box will not be awarded any marks, regardless of whether or not they choose the correct answer. In the short-answer questions, spelling inaccuracies are accepted as long as the words written are recognisable. The only exception to this is when spelling is dictated on the recording.

- Candidates will face various challenges in each question, as shown in the table below. They may encounter words not contained in the syllabus. In such a case, they should be able to use strategies to guess the meaning of the word or decide that the word isn't essential to understanding the overall meaning of the piece. See the examples in the sample exams in this booklet.
- These texts will have an emphasis on facts and opinions.

Marking

- Each question in section 5 carries one mark. Each question in the other sections carries two marks. This gives a total of 60 marks, which represents 25% of the whole examination.
- Candidates are strongly advised to follow instructions in order to minimise their chances of losing marks.

- All oral examinations are recorded for monitoring, standardisation and research purposes.

Marking

- Candidates are assessed on a sustained performance over the three sections of the examination and not on individual tasks. The speaking component accounts for 35% of the total marks for this examination.
- In the Scrúdú Bhonneleibhéal 2 oral examination, examiners award marks according to five analytical criteria. These are: grammatical accuracy, vocabulary, pronunciation, fluency and communication. ‘Communication’ this refers to candidates’ ability to use communicative strategies like asking for repetition or clarification and their ability to display basic sociolinguistic competences by using the simplest everyday forms of greetings, farewells, introductions, saying please, thank you, sorry etc).
- Examiners receive comprehensive training. A robust monitoring and standardisation process is in place to ensure the reliability of the marking process.
